Dear Passport Holder,

Welcome to the Linguistic Risk-Taking Initiative launched by the Official Languages and Bilingualism Institute (OLBI). This passport will help you discover new and creative ways of using the University of Ottawa’s unique bilingual campus as a resource in your language-learning journey. On behalf of our team of professors, staff members and students, I wish you happy linguistic risk-taking!

Nikolay Slavkov, Ph.D.
Associate Professor, Official Languages and Bilingualism Institute (OLBI)

WHY LINGUISTIC RISK-TAKING?

A linguistic risk is an authentic, every-day communication task that some language learners may shy away from and may need special encouragement to engage in. Research has shown that some learners hesitate to take risks and do not always benefit from extra opportunities to practice their second or additional language outside of the language classroom. Real-life communication is not stress-free. It may involve “risk factors” such as making mistakes, being misunderstood, misunderstanding others, taking on a different identity, changing language use habits, and so on. That is why some learners tend to stay within the comfort zone of their preferred language when going about their daily business on campus and thus miss out on opportunities to “live” bilingually or multilingually. This passport intends to encourage you to take various linguistic risks that will boost your confidence in your second or additional language. The passport will guide you in turning your daily routines into linguistic risks and in using our bilingual campus and multilingual uOGlobal community as a real-life language-learning resource. This passport is designed for French or English as target languages. However, in many cases you can extend its use to other languages that you may be learning.

RULES OF ENGAGEMENT

It’s simple and it’s fun:

• Take as many risks as possible from the list included in this passport. You can even take a picture of yourself taking the risk and post it on social media with #.
• Give yourself a check mark for each risk taken:
  ◊ Most risks can be repeated up to three times (see number of checkboxes by each risk);
  ◊ Risks can be taken in any order you like;
  ◊ You do not need to undertake all risks listed;
  ◊ Each time you undertake a risk, indicate whether you thought the level of risk was High, Medium, or Low by adding the corresponding letter (H, M, or L) beside the checkbox.
• Feel free to use the blank passport pages provided at the back to propose additional risks.
• Tally the risks you have taken. After completing at least 20 risks (including repeated ones), submit the passport to your language teacher or to the OLBI reception desk (MHN 130) to enter a draw for prizes. If you are participating in uOGlobal, submit your passport to your facilitator during a workshop or at the reception of the International Office (TBT M386).
• Submissions for the draw will be accepted from ___________________________ until ___________________________.
• If you win a prize, you will receive it in your language class or you will be notified by email.
• Make sure you enter a valid uOttawa email address.
LINGUISTIC RISKS

Most risks can be repeated up to three times (see number of checkboxes by each risk); no particular order is required; please rate each risk as High (H), Medium (M) or Low (L) each time you undertake it.

Example #1: I read the rules of engagement of the linguistic risk-taking passport.

Example #2: I talked about the linguistic risk-taking passport with a friend.

LINGUISTIC RISK-TAKER PROFILE

I am eager to use my second official language everywhere on campus and beyond!

I am not a native speaker of this language and I am okay with that!

Yes, I may have an accent but that’s what makes me unique!

I am not afraid of making errors; they are natural and normal in language use!

I consider myself bilingual in French and English (even if one of my two official languages may be stronger than the other one).

The Linguistic Risk Taking Initiative has received support from the Destination 2020 Academic Initiatives Fund of the Vice-President Academic and Provost’s Office. The initiative’s goal is to promote bilingualism in Canada’s two official languages as a competitive advantage, central to the University of Ottawa’s mission. Within the framework of the uOGlobal initiative, the objective of the linguistic passport is to promote multilingualism and internationalisation. The linguistic passport supports intercultural and international learning within the uOGlobal community.
